The Rodies: seventh ward wizards

Editor's note: The Seventh Ward has been legendary in Terre Haute politics. Election after election, the votes are there for the Democrats. Charlie and Liz Rodie are legendary characters in that ward. The following profile is the third and final in a series on local committeemen who are known for their prowess in the absentee ballot race and electioneering in general.

Charlie Rodie poking around the tomato garden in his back yard doesn't exactly remind you of Marlon Brando in "The Godfather," but he has done about as many favors and probably gained as many political enemies as that fictional don.

Traces of Rodie's Italian ancestry linger in his speech as he talks about politics, his favorite subject and one he should be expert at. He has been at it since he was 20 years old in 1932.

As veteran Democratic committeemen go, Rodie is a newcomer, having only been a committeeman since 1960. But his experience in local politics has been a lifetime avocation.

He and his wife Liz have Precinct J of the Seventh Ward and they work it well. In addition, the Rodies have a daughter in another precinct who is very active.

Rodie's precinct north of Twelve Points is typical of Terre Haute's dependable Democratic precincts. It is made up mostly of working people and retired persons and the Rodies help them with their problems downtown.

Rodie is one of the more controversial and outspoken committeemen. He is disdainful of a number of fellow committeemen who, he claims, will only deliver votes "for the money." The same charges are made about him, mostly by disgruntled candidates who thought they were going to win his precinct, but didn't.

"I don't want money from them," Rodie replies indignantly when the subject is broached. "All I want is favors for my people if they win." Such favors are fixing holes in the street, keeping alleys in good repair, getting the trash hauled away.

Rodie's opinions about some of the local politicians are unflattering. He has his enemies and his friends. Mayor William Brighton ranks high on the enemies list, while George (County Treasurer) Schoffstall is among the best of friends.

Liz Rodie used to work for Brighton when he was county clerk, but lost her political respect for him when he gave up the office "to a Republican" to run for the mayor's job. Both Charlie and Liz are dyed in the wool Democrats and have a hard time squaring anything that benefits Republicans with the good of the party.

Now Liz works for County Treasurer George Schoffstall. In their precinct Liz is acknowledged as the one who gets out the vote and she is one of the hardest-working committeemen in the business.

Both Rodies are down on today's politicians -- "they are too greedy" -- and upon the absentee voting system which has evolved to meet the demands of these candidates -- votes which can be counted upon before the election.

"It's a shame what Terre Haute citizens have to tolerate -- the mayor, that police chief and that fire chief," Rodie complains. Evidently, Mayor Brighton feels the same way about Rodie since the committeeman says he can get virtually no cooperation from city officials for work in his precinct.

Both Rodies deny having ever voted for a Republican, but Charlie feels the days are numbered for local Democrats unless they shape up. "The Republicans are going to take over, next time if not this," he warns.

According to Rodie, he and his wife have been subjected to attempts to gerrymander their precinct, embarrass them, beat them and freeze them out. None have been very successful yet, though the precinct boundaries were changed, depriving Charlie of a lot of old dependables.

Attempts have been made to "steal" their absentees, with another woman posing as Liz's daughter in at least one instance at a home in the Rodie precinct.

According to Charlie, the Rodie influence with voters comes about by taking care of their problems. "We pay their taxes for them, get their mortgage exemptions, pick up groceries, trim trees, fix leaky faucets and other neighborly tasks.

"Someone is desperate and needs help from the trustee and is ashamed to ask for it, we help them get it," Rodie explains.

"You are good to people so they want to return the favor. It is a tough job, 365 days a year."

The Rodies service about 400 absentees all told, not all of them in their own precinct. Anybody with that many absentees draws a lot of visits from politicians and the Rodie kitchen table has seen just about all of them from a fledgling Birch Bayh to a worried Ralph Berry.

Charlie and Liz Rodie have seen them all, but they yearn for the former days of Vigo County politics when Dutch Letzkus ran a tight ship as chairman and Mayor Ralph Tucker listened -- and responded -- to committeemen.

And while they do a good job playing the absentee game, the Rodies remember the pre-absentee push days as more pleasant and just as successful.

It is not just the hard work either, for, in many ways, absentees are easier than some of the previous methods politicians have always used to influence votes. Charlie himself used to quit his job a couple of months before the election to campaign full time for the candidates he was backing.

The election game is different now, and Charlie and Liz, reflecting the feelings of many of an older generation of committeemen, aren't particularly happy with the new rules.

They are also afraid that many of their voters are blaming the Democrats for the hassle on the absentees and that the ability of the party to deliver this fall may be in serious question.

But aside from their fears and yearnings for a time past when candidates were gentlemen and committeemen were more respected, they will both be out there working until late election night when the last vote is counted.

Retirement community plans considered here

Senior Citizens (T.H.)

A luncheon meeting to discuss possible construction of a retirement community in the Terre Haute area is scheduled for noon Thursday at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge.

Mrs. Mary Alice Banks is chairman of a planning committee interested in building a $6 to $8 million complete retirement community here and she recently announced early plans at a press conference.

Also at the press conference were Thomas Finnerty, president of Terre Haute Savings Bank, and Dr. Alan Rankin, former president of Indiana State University.

Mrs. Banks said the luncheon is open to anyone interested. A presentation will be made by representatives of Presbyterian Housing Program, an Indianapolis-based, not-for-profit corporation which owns and operates six such communities.

The corporation would be willing to develop such a community here if sufficient interest is shown. Such communities are non-sectarian and are open to persons of any religious faith, Mrs. Banks emphasized.

The $6 to $8 million project requiring about 40 acres of land under consideration would offer studio, one and two bedroom apartments to persons of any faith or persuasion. In addition, according to Mrs. Banks, a resident would be able to live independently and yet have the security of a guaranteed lifetime occupancy agreement.

The community would have also long term and emergency health care available, as well as central dining, maintenance, housekeeping transportation and recreational services and activities.

Mrs. Banks' committee was organized by a group of individuals of retirement age living in the Terre Haute area.

"Many of us expressed a desire for a retirement village in Terre Haute so we would not have to move from the area," Mrs. Banks said. "We decided to organize to see what could be done. The meeting is being called to see how many others are interested."

As a result of their investigations, the committee members feel that retirement communities enable their residents to achieve a more comfortable and secure retirement.

Presbyterian Housing Program, Inc. was invited to come because committee members have visited the Program's various communities and were "impressed with the designs of the facilities and quality of the operation," Mrs. Banks noted.

Members of Mrs. Banks' committee are Mrs. Drake, Dr. Betty Blumberg, the Rev. John Chironna, James Conover, Dr. Harold Cox, T. J. Finnerty, Sid Levin, Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDougal, Mrs. Powell, Leon Sackrider, Mrs. Bea Sayers, Dr. Wayne Schomer, the Rev. Archie Showen and Mrs. Glen Yeager.

Meis plans women's seminar

A seminar to help women gain greater personal and professional self confidence will be sponsored by the Meis Stores on Wednesday October 27th at the Terre Haute Holiday Inn.

Leading the session, which will be preceded by a breakfast at 8:30 a.m., will be Barbara Holt a dynamic career specialist and counselor.

The three-hour seminar is designed to show every career motivated woman how to emphasize and project her skills, abilities and talents in order to attain her ultimate goal.

Barbara Holt is a nationally recognized authority in the field of career advancement for women. After graduating from college, marrying and having two children, she embarked on a career of her own. The foundation of her present work in career counseling came from this period when she found it necessary to develop new approaches to finding a job commensurate with her ability and background. She presently serves as President of Barbara Holt Associates, a recruitment firm serving Fortune 500 companies.

She has conducted seminars for the Columbia University Graduate School of Business Administration, the Fashion Group's "Women in Management" Symposium and the National Home Fashions League. She is currently a consultant to North Dakota State University and has recently produced eight one-half hour TV programs in Career Advancement at the request of the University. Ms. Holt has also been invited to speak at the National Convention of the American Women in Radio and Television in Minneapolis. Her Career Advancement seminars have been presented throughout the United States sponsored by leading department stores.

Tickets for the October 27th event are available in the layaway departments of the three Terre Haute Meis Stores. Tickets are $5.00 and the price includes breakfast plus all materials needed for the program.

LOCAL GIRLS CLUB JUDGED BEST IN REGION

Girls Club of Terre Haute has been recognized as the most outstanding girls club in a six-state area following a two-day Midwest Region conference in Bedford, Indiana last week. Competition for the annual award was conducted among fourteen other clubs affiliated with Girls Clubs of America in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Judging for the award is based on the overall program of the club, staff and board responsiveness, and meeting the high performance standards required at both the regional and national levels. A traveling plaque will be held by the local club for one year. Mrs. Roger Davies, board president, and Mrs. Pam Branam, executive director, accepted the award in Bedford on behalf of the club.

This recognition is particularly significant to Girls Club of Terre Haute, which recently changed its name from Torner Girls Club, because in 1971 it was denied United Way support. Following a complete reevaluation, program overhaul and private fund drive, the club was reinstated in the United Way in 1972, and since then has steadily increased its services to the community.

The club currently operates a pre-school program and baby-sitting referral program as well as a federally funded extension at Warren School which is now in its third year.

Membership in the club is over 400 girls ranging in age from five years to fifteen, and week-day attendance at the main club, 1107 South Fourth Street, Torner Park, has averaged 100 girls for the past several weeks. The club also picks up girls at the Margaret Avenue and Lockport Housing units, Fuqua, Ben Franklin, Rea and Deming Schools.

Classes currently being offered at the club include a new gymnastics program, exercise and jogging, track and field, gourmet cooking, macrame, quilting, journalism, indoor gardening and houseplant care, baton, and jewelry making. Girls who do not participate in classes may engage in other supervised activities such as the playground, trampoline, playing pool or ping pong, independent craft projects or reading in the library. Seasonal field trips are also part of the club program.

In addition to Mrs. Branam, other staff persons are Miss Jan McBride, assistant director, Mrs. Brenda Monaghan, Warren director, Therese Finn, Rhonda Carter, Cathy Ward, Sue Thackery, Marilyn Gary, Marsha Washington, Wally Waters, and Sue Rendall.

The club is administered by a twenty-two member board composed of Mrs. Richard Davidson, Mrs. Richard Tucker, Mrs. J. D. Davidson, Kenneth Coy, Mrs. James Shanks, Bert Nelson, Mrs. John Bradford, Miss Julie Ames, Mrs. Barbara Elder, Mrs. Joe Petty, Mrs. Richard Isles, Henry Stadler, Mrs. Herbert Gerdink, Ed Wormser and B. Curtis Wilkinson.

Membership in the Girls Club of Terre Haute is open to any girl aged five years or over for $3 per year.

LARRISON HONORED AS "GOLDEN" PHARMACIST

County Clerk Leland Larrison was honored last Saturday night for his 50 years as a pharmacist. He received a special certificate of recognition during the annual meeting of the Indiana Pharmaceutical Association, Inc., in Indianapolis.

Larrison operated a drug store at Fifteenth and Locust streets for many years. The building now houses a tax service operated by him and his wife.
